DETERMINE YOUR BUDGET

Did you know you don't necessarily have to buy a new electric car to use one!

Buying an electric car can cost you anywhere from $200K to $20K, so understanding your affordability range is an important first step in directing your shopping efforts.

Today, used and global imports open up new doors to EV ownership, as do subscription models, where you lease the car for a short period of time.

Remember, that an electric car costs substantially less to run and maintain than a conventional car - so while they might be more expensive to acquire, over the car's life, your costs will typically be less to run it. How much less depends on a lot of factors, but you're sure to be impressed by the monthly fuel savings!

TEST YOUR LIFESTYLE FIT

Woah! You think you're ready to switch to an electric car but you're a bit unsure of its convenience compared to petrol or diesel?

Don't worry, you're not alone.

Questions about this lifestyle change (the one where you swap petrol for electricity) are very common.

Here is a Checklist of the top things to consider:

- My parked car can easily (and safely) access electricity at home
- I understand I will have to pre-plan fuelling when on road trips (300km+)
- I know my towing needs (if any)
- I know how much interior space I must have
- I am willing to learn all the things about EV charging (budget 5-6 hours)

TALK TO AN EXPERT

A WHIRL AMBASSADOR!

Investing in a new technology is a big decision and one we don't think you should have to make alone.

Whirl's Ambassador's are volunteer electric car owners who are happy to share their lived experiences with others considering the change to electric motoring. You can book in session by phone (or soon, in person) with them to unpack the ins and outs of driving an electric car (and have a peer test ride)!

The great part about talking to an Whirl Ambassador is that there is no pressure to act. Our Ambassadors are independent and not aligned with any particular brand. And, you can speak to them at a time convenient for you, 7 days a week!
